Josh Heytvelt...

Josh Heytvelt has landed a spot in the NBA, but it's probably a bit more precarious than he envisioned.

The Clarkston native was invited to join the Washington Wizards' summer league club Wednesday, The Washington Post reported on its Web site. Heytvelt's club will take part in a 21-team gathering July 10-19 at Las Vegas.

The summer-league squads are generally made up of undrafted players, journeymen and some drafted players.

After his collegiate career at Gonzaga, Heytvelt was expected to be a high second-round selection in last week's NBA draft. But the 6-foot-11, 260-pound forward/center wasn't taken.

The Wizards will hold a mini-camp for their summer-league invitees from July 10-13. Their first game at the Las Vegas event will be July 14 against Cleveland.
