

Here's what could happen in court today (according to Joker).

Starr Kelso: This is America. Jim Brannon is the winner of this election. Unfortunately, he's a victim of Chicago-style politics.

Judge Simpson: It appears your client lost the election. If I am not mistaken by five votes.

Gridley: That is correct your honor. The election was canvassed. Mr. Kelso's client must have been happy with the outcome because he declined to ask for a recount, which was his right.

Larry Spencer: Excuse, me, I'd like to point out that the many of the people who voted in the election don't exist. They're imaginary people, who Mike Kennedy created. I have proof right here, just take a look Judge Simpson stops Spencer: Sir, I'd ask you to refrain from speaking.

Kelso: Your honor, my client is simply asking you to prevent a great injustice. He deserves his day in court. If you allow Mr. Kennedy and others to be sworn in, you're validating the election results, results we feel are inaccurate.

Gridley: If you're going to restrain anybody from being sworn into office, I'd ask you set a bond for Mr. Brannon's lawsuit. I'd recommend $50,000.

Kelso: Objection. My client is acting in good faith. He's already put forth $575 toward. My client is unemployed, and we believe it was at the hands of Mike Kennedy. A bond amount of $50,000 is like asking the bank to give you a personal loan after they've foreclosed on your house.

Judge Simpson: Why is this coming before me at the last minute?

Kelso: We've tried to reach out to the city and Mr. Kennedy. They've ignored our repeated phone calls, faxes and letters We're trying to reach a settlement where Jim Brannon is sworn into office tonight and Mike Kennedy admits he had Jim fired.

Gridley: Uh, I am not sure what to say. That's simply not true.

Snickering from the gallery.

Judge Simpson: Considering how this matter was handled and how Jim Brannon isn't the victor, I am going to deny this motion.

Mary Souza jumps up and screams: Tyrant!

Judge Simpson bangs on the gavel. Have that woman removed.

Mary Souza begins singing God Bless America, slightly off key.
