

Kiki Miller, a longtime Coeur d'Alene resident and business owner, made it official today and filed her petition for candidacy for seat number 6 on the Coeur d'Alene City Council.

Since announcing her intention to run for office last month, Miller has been seeking input from community members to guide her campaign. She encourages community members to actively get involved in the community driven 2030 Visioning Project so that all voices are heard and channeled into a plan that will help determine the future of Coeur d'Alene.

Miller has lived in Coeur d'Alene since 1975 and has been involved in numerous civic and leadership projects over the past several decades.

"I'm extremely excited and dedicated to serving on the council and truly value the opportunity to be part of shaping our city's bright future," Miller said.

"Our community has accomplished great things in the past and I'm dedicated to seeing that momentum continue," Miller said. "We live in one of the most beautiful regions in the country and as a longtime resident I understand our community's history and how passionate we all are about our North Idaho quality of life."

Miller's vision for the city includes a quality education system, a diverse offering of sustainable jobs, responsible planning, and strong fiscal management in order to grow the local economy, while protecting the natural resources and quality of life that we all enjoy.

"My experience as a local entrepreneur, community activist, and civic leader has provided a great perspective to our community," said Miller. "I want to be a voice for all residence of this great city."

Miller and her husband have one son who attends Lake City High School. She has owned Kagey Company, Inc., a local marketing, publication, and promotions firm, since 1992. Miller has served as a Coeur d'Alene Chamber of Commerce Executive Director, as a Women's Center Board Member, and has been named Volunteer of the Year for both the Coeur d'Alene and Post Falls Chambers. She also received Woman of the Year honors from the local Soroptimist organization and has volunteered or been appointed to several leadership roles for numerous organizations and nonprofits.
