

Coeur d'Alene's Peeing Wall ... (5.5.2014)

I was at the CDA city Park on Saturday (May 3). I was in the men's room behind the Kiwanis band shell when a boisterous group of young men entered. I was quickly and equally overwhelmed by the mix of foul language and alcohol. I was just getting ready to exit the stall when a young lady(one of four) declares she has to pee like a (expletive deleted)! ! and told me to hurry. I exited and opened the door hitting the sorority sister in the head as she was so intoxicated she was leaning against the door for support.

I washed my hands and quickly left back to our gathering of family and friends. Several in our party were visiting CDA from Alabama, Denver, Albuquerque and Seattle. We were gathered by the basketball courts with several families and lots of small children. I walked over and told them of my recent interaction and was met with snickers. My cousin and his wife from Seattle explained what they had just seen walking from the resort to the park. They had seen up to eight students exit one of the four buses and immediately proceeded to the nearest shrubbery to vomit. By his estimate there were at least eight people getting sick right off the bus.

We were all sadly entertained but as a whole we were shocked by what happened next. Three young men walked up behind the museum building and proceeded to urinate on the back wall in full public display. More shockingly was what happened next. Five or Six sorority sisters walked up to the wall, immediately adjacent to the boys, dropped their pants and urinated in full view of the entire park and a crowd of approving onlookers from their group. All wearing white sweatshirts identifying themselves as Wazzu Greek.

I had asked one fellow who they were and they were definitively Washington State University Greek Members.

(I've attached a photo where you can see the men walking away from the pee marks on the wall and the girls in various stages of the act.)
