

LABRADOR WINS IDAHO'S FIRST CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

November 3, Boise Raul Labrador defeated Walt Minnick to take back Idaho's First Congressional District with just under 50% of the vote at about 1:30AM Wednesday early morning. Raul's message of fiscal conservatism, government accountability and controlling runaway spending was exactly the recipe the voters of the First Congressional district wanted to hear.

Commenting on his victory, Labrador said:

"Everywhere I campaigned throughout the district people wanted someone to bring sanity back to Washington DC. Whether it was a coffee shop in Nampa or a small business in Coeur d'Alene the message was the same; our government is out of control.

He continued, "I have always put the voters of Idaho first and I'm humbled by the support we received. They have placed their trust in me. I will hit the ground running in Washington to restore their faith in Congress and start working to create jobs."

Labrador was joined by his wife Becca, children and hundreds of supporters as the race was finally called for him after 1.30AM.

"I couldn't have done this without the support of my family. It was a special day for us as we not only won the congressional seat but my older son Michael was able to cast his first vote with me," said Labrador.

"I ran for this seat because I want to make sure my children are afforded the opportunities I have had growing up in the greatest country in the world," Labrador concluded.
