

David Keyes Facebook post re: term limiting his Idaho Lottery post:

Just wanted to let everyone know that I imposed my own term limits as the Vice Chairman of the Idaho Lottery.

In December, I notified lottery staff and the Governor's office that I wouldn't commit to a second term. The 10 years I have been on the commission have opened my eyes to the fact that Idaho has world-class folks running the state lottery. Director Jeff Anderson is a smart and effective leader and is astute enough to surround himself with quality department heads. Grant Brackebusch, VP and President of the New Jersey Mining Company in Kellogg, will take my seat as the Independent member of the commission. He was approved by the Idaho Senate this week.

I appreciate the appointment from then Gov. Risch and I firmly believe that every resident should take part in something bigger than themselves - and then step aside to make room for someone else to have that experience.

It should be noted that I can now legally buy a Powerball ticket at Dairy Depot. Don't be surprised if I win. I know the secret...just ask me about the one thing all Powerball winners have in common.

All the best!
